Background

In April 2024, Penny was invited to a handful of meetings in the South Island, which morphed into a nationwide roadshow. Our intention is to share some of the research we have undertaken, and reference the work of many others, in order to inform and empower families.

The content in these videos are compiled by Let Kids Be Kids. We encourage you to do your own research, and draw your own conclusions. Take the time to dive on in, for your children’s sake. A full reference list is below, of all content shown throughout this video.

At our first meeting in Hokitika, Elisabeth Cave was invited to speak about her research on ‘Identity Disruption’. Her findings (in Part 2) were deemed so important that she was invited along on the rest of the tour...

13 venues and three weeks later, we wrapped up the South Island tour in Wanaka in early May.

In June, Penny and Elisabeth commenced their travels around the North Island. With 36 locations in total, and well over over 1000 families reached, our hope is that more parents and families are empowered to go on their own journeys of discovery, for the sake of their children’s wellbeing and healthy futures.

If you’re not spending time looking into what is being served up to your children at school - we urge you to do so. Don’t rely on the government or education system to have your child’s best interests as their priority. YOU are the ones who must put your children first.

Part 2 - Identity Disruption, Elisabeth Cave

This content will be eye-opening for parents and grandparents... We hope it is insightful for those in the education system, or who have recently departed from it. The conversation around what is happening in our education system (whether in early childhood, school or university) in NZ and worldwide is an urgent one.

The Philosophy of Education

Elisabeth Cave shares her understanding of the Philosophy of Education and illustrates the changes in education over recent decades that bring us to our current situation. We live in a time where true education and ‘the pursuit of the good’ has, in some instances, been replaced by prescriptive training and indoctrination.

She explores how this may be a significant contributing factor to the poor wellbeing outcomes many of our children are dealing with today.

Identity disruption and hyper focus

Elisabeth shares her findings about identity, identity disruption, and the current hyper focus on gender identity, and its concerning ramifications.

If you’re not spending time looking into what is being served up to your children at school - we urge you to do so.

Don’t rely on the government or education system to have your child’s best interests as their priority. YOU are the ones who must put your children first.

Part 3 - Policy Vs People, Penny Marie

During her time on her local school board, Penny noticed that policies at times appeared to be more important than people, or contrary to common sense at least. People before policies, in a world that is policies before people, became her catch-cry and can be clearly seen in myriad of government and corporate bodies nowadays, more than ever.

In the final part of this video series, Penny raises some concerns in:

- School RSE content
- Council policies and actions
- Sport NZ (a Governing body)
- Corporations, and the Rainbow Tick
- Charities - the myriad of rainbow charities in NZ, with a brief look at the $$.
